GENERAL INFORMATION

1. BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE OF THE SEMINAR

Violence against women and girls is a human rights violation and an extreme form of gender-based discrimination. It is rampant both in the public and private spheres and jeopardizes rights, freedom, health, the quality of life and the very life of women, irrespective of their nationality, age and social status. This form of violence has considerable human, social and economic costs and reduces women's contribution to development, peace and security.

Several East and Southern African countries have shown their willingness to eliminate this scourge and have adopted relevant legislation. Parliaments and parliamentarians are responsible for passing laws to prevent and crack down on all forms of violence against women and girls, but parliamentary responsibility does not end there. This first step often remains insufficient and must be accompanied by strong measures to secure effective law enforcement and initiatives to raise awareness and change attitudes.

This seminar aims to provide men and women parliamentarians of the region with the elements of a comprehensive and multisectoral response to violence against women and familiarize them with the components of legislation to effectively tackle this problem. Special emphasis will be placed on prevention and parliamentary mechanisms to secure the effective enforcement of relevant legislation, including parliament's oversight and budgetary powers and ability to monitor and facilitate law enforcement.

Parliamentarians will be afforded the opportunity to exchange experiences, take stock of the situation in the region and express their opinions. During the seminar, parliamentarians will be able to identify appropriate parliamentary action required to ensure respect for the fundamental rights of women and girls and their right to a life free of violence.
