
About the Authors

Cheywa Spindel earned a Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of São Paulo, Brazil, and conducted post-doctoral studies at the Institute of Development Studies at Sussex University, England. Dr. Spindel has worked extensively with Brazilian government agencies and organizations. She has also worked with the International Development Research Centre in Canada and served as director of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation's Office in Brazil for eight years.

Elisa Levy holds a Master's degree in International Affairs from Columbia University. She has worked on gender and development issues with the United Nations Development Programme in Eastern Europe and New York City.

Melissa Connor holds a Master's degree in International Affairs from Columbia University. She has worked on development issues in Latin America and the Caribbean and in Asia.